Parsley Elected to NCLM Board of Directors

Will Serve Two-Year Term Helping Lead Organization

(GREENVILLE, N.C.) -- Concord Council Member Jennifer Parsley has been selected for a two-year term on the Board of Directors of the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

In that role, Council Member Parsley will help oversee the advocacy and membership service efforts of the League, which represents more than 540 cities, towns and villages across North Carolina.

The selection was made by League members during the organization's annual conference, CityVision 2017, held last week in Greenville.

League Executive Director Paul Meyer said he looks forward to working with Council Member Parsley and is confident that her contributions will continue to help NCLM better enable cities and towns across North Carolina to better serve their residents.

Council Member Parsley will be serving her second term on the board.

CityVision 2017 brought more than 600 attendees to the Greenville Convention Center. The event included programming focused on entrepreneurial solutions for economic development, regional approaches to municipal challenges, and Smart Cities technology.

Attendees of CityVision 2017 also heard from National League of Cities President Matt Zone, State Treasurer Dale Folwell, Court of Appeals Chief Judge Linda McGee and state Supreme Court Justice Barbara Jackson.

About the League

The North Carolina League of Municipalities is a membership association of 540 great hometowns – representing nearly every municipality in the state. The League advocates for its members, from the largest city to the smallest village, on the full range of legislative issues that affect municipalities.

For more than 100 years, the League has promoted – and continues to promote – good government by offering non-partisan advocacy, insurance and other services – as directed by its membership.
